

MIC GILLETTE

World-Renowned Musician, Educator and Clinician

Although Mic Gillette is best known for 40+ years of stellar horn work with Tower of Power, Cold Blood, and Blood, Sweat & Tears, not as many people realize that he has appeared on several hundred albums and CDs for some of the biggest names in the music business — Santana, The Rolling Stones, Quincy Jones, Rod Stewart, Elton John, Jefferson Starship, Huey Lewis and the News, The Doobie Brothers, Sheryl Crow, and hundreds more.

The majority of these appearances were during nearly two decades as leader of the world-renowned Tower of Power Horn Section. Mic has now returned to his original band and legacy, the Tower of Power and is once again touring the country and the world.

Mic also has a busy solo career and released his first solo CD in 2005, Ear Candy, featuring Lenny Williams, Chester Thompson, Rocco Prestia, Bill Champlin (Chicago), and the first reunion of the original Tower of Power Horns.

In spite of being a world-class performer, Mic prides himself on being a teacher first. With an innate ability to connect personally with any audience, Mic has educated and entertained hundreds of college, high school, and middle school musicians and their families, as well as master class audiences of professional musicians.

In a clinic situation, Mic works with jazz bands and individual musicians to not only improve their playing, but also their awareness of music, their appreciation of the gift of music, and their joy in playing their instrument.

Mic covers important subjects such as ensemble blending, sound and tonal production, i.e. air supply, musical “feel”, and performance skills. Mic often performs with the musicians in an evening concert following the clinic. Ask about this for your group.

The Berklee School of Music, the University of Missouri, Chabot College, Cabrillo College, and hundreds of other schools, drum and bugle corps, music camps, and musical organizations have hosted these special events with Mic.

While Mic is a brass player and specializes in the entire range of brass instruments, you can expect that every student will come away from a Mic Gillette clinic or special event with lessons learned, a smile on their faces, and a love of music burning in their hearts.
